

This is not what America is about! I would not like to see our country become so paranoid that it feels the need to spy upon ordinary citizens. I believe that the recent legislature gives the government the ability to spy upon suspected criminals and that is enough.

Personal computers have been freely produced and sold up until today. This would set the precedent that the government of the United States may directly enforce that all computers sold must contain both spy machinery and remote control machinery. Under the Broadcast Flag Mandate, it would be a felony to disable the spy and remote control machinery. This is a terrible intrusion on personal rights and privacy.
